COUNCIL MOST SUCCESSFUL ANTI-SEMITIC ORGANIZATION IN THE WORLD—McDONALD

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (NJP)—James G. McDonald, former U.S. ambassador to Israel, called the American Council for Judaism "the most successful anti-Semitic organization in the world" in an Israeli Bond drive speech here Sunday night.

McDonald declined to elaborate on his statement.

Following the speech, Rabbi Benjamin Teller, leader of Temple Adath Israel, where the bond rally was held, said that the largest bond holder in Evansville was Roy Ryan, a non-Jewish oil man, who has $10,000 invested in Israel bonds.

Discussing the Middle East crisis, McDonald stated that there will be no war between Israel and the Arab nations "if Israel is strengthened sufficiently to deter Arab aggression."

THE FORMER ambassador, who assumed his diplomatic post in 1949 and remained in Israel until 1951, said that economic strength alone would keep greater Arabia from fighting. He viewed accomplishments in transportation, utilities, industry, housing, irrigation of desert land into farmland, and food supplies as constituents of "economic strength."

The drive, first Israeli Bond effort here since 1951, sold $14,250 in bonds.

Evansville is a community in which there is considerable anti-Zionist feelings.

PUBLICITY IN the daily press for the meeting was limited to the first announcements. Only one of the two papers covered the affair, the Evansville Courier.

There was considerable opposition to the meeting from some of the leading businessmen who are anti-Zionists. Rabbi Teller criticized the group.

PRODUCER BANKRUPT

TEL AVIV—A bankrupt petition by Jack Padwa, producer of the film "Hill 24 Doesn't Answer," was discussed by the District Court here.

SENSE OF RESPONSIBILITY URGED ON JUDAISM COUNCIL

LOS ANGELES (NJP)—A "greater sense of responsibility to our common heritage and destiny" was urged by the Southern California Association of Liberal Rabbis upon the American Council for Judaism.

The 39 spiritual leaders of Reform congregations in this area urged "a serious soul searching" in the Council members whom it charged with publicly impugning "the integrity of long-established Jewish institutions" and distorting "the principles of both Judaism and Americanism."

The statement declared that the rabbis "deeply regret and resent the effort by the American Council for Judaism to dissuade Americans from contributing to the United Jewish Welfare Fund and the Israel Bond drive, which are American Jewry's principal instruments for the salvation of our brethren abroad as well as for the support of a multitude of worthy endeavors in America itself."

Judiciary Committee To Confirm Sobeloff

WASHINGTON (NJP) — The Senate may still get a chance to confirm Solicitor General of the U. S. Simon E. Sobeloff to the United States Court of Appeals at the present session. A group of southern Senators led by Sen. Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina have blocked action on the nomination made by President Eisenhower eleven months ago on the grounds of his support of the Supreme Courts ruling on desegregation in the public schools.

The Senate Judiciary Committee was expected to act Thursday (June 28).

Southern B'nai B'rith District Backs ADL on Desegregation

RICHMOND, Va. (NJP)—B'nai B'rith District 5, meeting at its annual convention here, adopted a resolution in support of the Anti-Defamation League program of intelligent planning and programming by responsible groups and individuals in each community and state designed to meet the need of local communities and areas in implementing the decision of the United States Supreme Court on desegregation in public schools.

The resolution was introduced by George J. Talianoff of Miami Beach, ADL national commissioner and District 5 ADL chairman, and was adopted by a vote of 79 to 28 with the South Carolina delegation voting unanimously against it. District 5 consists of Florida, Georgia, the Carolinas, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

The text of the resolution follows.

Whereas, the ADL has been working wisely and constructively, in co-operation with other national and community forces, to resolve the human relations problems implicit in the implementation of the supreme court decision on public school desegregation and whereas the ADL has been working with the great body of concerned southerners in other religious organizations, Protestant and Catholic, who are similarly devoted to the American tradition of respect for law and order as well as human dignity and whereas, the ADL utilizes the best knowledge and proven techniques in the field of human relations to counteract the forces of bigotry which seek to exploit and pervert the real problems of desegregation for selfish economic and political advantage and whereas the ADL has assiduously avoided meaningless and self-serving pronouncements which tend to aggravate rather than reduce tensions,

Now therefore be it resolved that District Grand Lodge No. 5 hereby express its commendation of and pledge its support to the program of the ADL wherein and whereby through the application of intelligent planning and programming designed to meet the needs of local communities and areas working along with other responsible organizations and individuals in each community and state, the decision of the United State Supreme Court should be implemented.

Schwartz In Israel For More Talks

JERUSALEM (NJP)—Whether something important was being presented by the Development Corporation for Israel, sponsors of the Israel Bond drive, could not be learned, but Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, executive vice-president of the DCI, was here this week to talk to government officials.

Pattern Of American Judaism Seen Still In Future

Reform, Conservatism, Orthodoxy Not It

LONDON (NJP)—The search for an authentic American pattern of Judaism has not ended, William Frankel declared in The Jewish Chronicle here.

According to Frankel, the "Reform movement claimed in the past that it provided such a pattern," but its current return to some of the traditions jettisoned by its founders indicates that the search still continues.

As to Conservatism, Frankel felt that it "is still too vague to be described as a movement with a particular philosophy."

Frankel was not less critical of Orthodoxy, which he wrote "is cleft by the realization by some that a 20th century American environment does not permit the flowering of the East European pattern of traditional Judaism."

Frankel expressed the view that "Judaism will flourish" in the United States, but concluded that "the distinctive pattern of American Judaism is still to emerge from the present turbulent germination."

MOROCCO HOPES TO BLACKMAIL JEWS INTO SILENCE

CASABLANCA (WNS) — The Moroccan Government has proposed to the World Jewish Congress to permit between 5,000 and 6,000 Jews to leave the country, on condition that they should be the last to migrate. Jewish immigration agencies in Israel are expected to reject this offer, since 45,000 Jews, among whom 10,000 have relatives in Israel, have already registered for emigration and have passed their medical examination.

Meanwhile, the desperate situation of the many thousands of Jews from various parts of Morocco who are now stranded here became even more tragic this week when a warehouse in which they had stored their clothing and heavy luggage for transportation to Israel was set afire by unknown people, leaving thousands completely without any belongings. The owner of the warehouse had previously received anonymous threats ordering him to discontinue accepting luggage from Jews who flocked to Casablanca in the hope of proceeding soon to Israel.

A. L. Easterman of the World Jewish Congress has returned here after spending several days in consultation with Dr. Nahum Goldmann and others in Paris. He will make yet another effort to induce the Moroccan leaders to adopt a more reasonable and humane attitude.

Younger Reform Rabbis Defeat Approval

Decision On Women Rabbis Delayed

By LILI ELLER

National Jewish POST Correspondent

ATLANTIC CITY (NJP)—The heads of the Reform movement suffered a defeat here in their support of women as Reform rabbis when the decision on the matter was deferred at the annual convention of the Central Conference of American Rabbis.

Although the report by Rabbi Joseph Fink of Buffalo, giving Reform's blessing to women rabbis was supported by such names as Dr. Nelson Glueck, head of the Hebrew Union College - Jewish Institute of Religion and Dr. Maurice Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, it was not ratified by the convention.

THE PRESIDENT of the CCAR, Rabbi Barnett Brickner of Cleveland, advocated women rabbis in his report to the convention last year.

The revolt against the leadership was led by Rabbi Alvin Fine, of San Francisco, who was supported mainly by the younger rabbis.

The convention's action was interpreted here as a victory for the younger group of rabbis with a more conservative stand on the question of women rabbis. This group asked for the deferment on the grounds they wanted time to submit an opposition report.

During the discussion, some rabbis said this was an "inappropriate time" for such an unprecedented move. They felt that in light of the Reform movement's efforts in Israel, and the current controversy within the Synagogue Council of America, such a move now would only tend to split the American Jewish community further while registering no gains for the Reform branch.

Some rabbis argued that women rabbis would cause confusion in the function of women toward the family and the home.

Resolutions to include women in the rabbinate were passed by the CCAR as early as 1922.

Angela Buxton Seeded In Women's Tourney

2 Of 4 Jews In Wimbledon Play Meet In First Round; Flam Wins

WIMBLEDON (NJP)—By a trick of fate, two of the four Jews entered in the Wimbledon tourney were pitted against each other in the opening round, with Herbert Flam, of California, downing Irv Dorfman, of New York, 6-4, 6-3.

The other Jews in the men's tourney are Abe Segal of South Africa and Oliver Prenn, of England. Prenn, the son of the former German-Jewish Davis Cup player, is the junior British champion.

Angela Buxton, of England, the outstanding Jewish woman player in the world, is competing in the women's tourney. Dick Savitt won the tourney several years ago.

Women Are Banned, But Janet Temkin Charmed Her Way In, Then . . .

Israel Air Force Learns Women Will Marry

By LEO HEIMAN

National Jewish POST Correspondent

The Israel Air Force deeply regrets the marriage of its only female pilot, pretty golden-haired Janet Temkin who recently married another Air Force officer, named Shimon Buchbinder. Twenty-year-old Janet, only daughter of Mr. Solomon (Sol) Temkin, Director of the Israel Office of the British Zionist Federation, came to Israel from Britain at the age of 14.

She did not know even one word of Hebrew then, but went straight to the Ahad Ha'am High School in Petach-Tikvah, where her parents settled, and, within a couple of years, was the school's outstanding student and spoke a real sabra Hebrew.

She also joined Gadna-Avir, the youth service of the Israel Air Force, and became an aviation cadet at the age of 16. Drafted into the Israel Army at the age of 17½, pretty Janet requested an urgent appointment with the Personnel Distribution Officer at the Female Recruit Training Depot.

THE OFFICER in charge of personnel distribution and assignments only laughed when he heard Janet's request to be sent to flying school, and told her that the Israel Air Force did not accept any female pilots now, and that the only kinds of jobs open for women in the IAF were those of radio-operators on the ground, administration officers, supply clerks, parachute folders, medics, drivers, meteorological personnel, etc.—nothing in the air.

The Air Force banned women from entering the flying school because pilot training was very expensive, costing the taxpayers about 300,000 pounds per pilot, and the money-starved State of Israel could not very well afford to waste that much money on training a woman pilot, since women pilots in the past always got married and left the service.

MOREOVER, a male pilot,

even if he leaves active service, is still a pilot in the active reserves and does some flying every month, but a woman pilot, once she has a baby, is discharged from the reserves as well.

Still, Janet did not take no for an answer, and bothered the officer so much that he threatened to have her court-martialed for disobeying orders and insubordination. After a while, however, the tough officer gave up the struggle and sent Janet to the Air Force Training depot.

JANET WENT through and behind the proper channels of command and took her case up to the highest Air Force brass. They were finally so charmed and worn down by this blonde that they gave up and made an exception in her case, accepting her as a pilot cadet at the flying school after she promised not to get married.

Compulsory military service for women is two years, but pilot cadets are accepted for flight training only if they sign up for three years.

Janet entered the tough flying school before she was even 18 years old, and became the only girl among hundreds of rough and tough males of all sizes and characters who trained as pilots for the IAF.

THE INSTRUCTORS cracked down on Janet, determined to kick her out for the smallest infraction. She always got the toughest questions and exercises but, to everybody's but Janet's surprise, she graduated at the top of her class in spite of all the obstacles put in her way.

She was given the cherished pilot wings she desired so much by General Tolav, commander of the Air Force, in a special ceremony, and became one of the best liaison pilots in the Israel Air Force.

Until recently, Janet kept her promise not to get married but, as the sabras say, man proposes and God disposes, and she suddenly fell for a handsome Air Force officer named Shimon Buchbinder and married him with great pomp and ceremony.

ALTHOUGH the entire IAF brass band attended the ceremony, they gnashed their teeth in fury at the prospect of losing their only woman pilot, and now, following Janet's discharge, the Air Force regulations have been again amended to make them female-proof for the future.

For the time being, at least, Janet Temkin's marriage put an end to ambitious hopes of many Israeli girls to become pilots in the IAF.

IDENTITY CARDS REQUIRED

JERUSALEM—With only the Communists opposing, the kneset recently passed a bill extending the requirement that all people in Israel, both men and women, carry identity cards.

ANTIQUITIES UNEARTHED

NEW YORK—Recent fortification work in Israel has unearthed more antiquities than the Department of Antiquities in Jerusalem has so far been able to classify, the Israel Office of Information here has announced.

PENNSYLVANIA'S FIRST LADY WINS HEARTS OF ISRAELIS

By NADIA LOURIE

National Jewish POST Correspondent

TEL AVIV (NJP)—Mary Jane Leader—Pennsylvania's First Lady—seems to have taken Israel to her heart, while accompanying her husband, Governor George M. Leader, and their 11-year-old son, Michael, on their 10-day whirlwind tour of the country. Tall, blue-eyed and attractive in a clean-cut, distinguished way, Mary Jane found Israeli women better dressed and groomed than she expected, and was particularly impressed with their housewifely "resourcefulness" and ability to speak many languages in addition to their own Hebrew.

LIKE MOST first-time visitors, she was surprised to find the complete absence of any "Jewish" type, many blond children everywhere, and the majority of people in the street looking like any cross-section of Americans.

She was also amazed to find to what extent American ideas and the American way of life were familiar to the people of Israel, who seemed to be acquainted with every aspect of the American scene, including popular television personalities like David Garroway, etc. The hotels were as good as any in America, she said, and Israel's shoreline more beautiful than their own in New Jersey.

WITH HER 37-year-old governor-husband, who is a native of Pennsylvania's agricultural York County and a ninth generation Pennsylvania Dutchman, whose family has been farming in York County since Revolutionary days, she looked at Israel's farming projects through the eyes of an experienced farmer. The Leaders sell 1 million baby chicks and 60,000 broilers per year, and their knowledgeable farmers' questions endeared them to the farming communities they visited—who felt that here were no mere politician and his wife—but "real folks" like themselves.

That is why the dedication of the Leader woodland of 250,000 trees on the barren hills outside Jerusalem, which took place on June 14, was so warmly greeted.

A group of Pennsylvanians touring Israel in the governmental party included well-known communal leaders from Philadelphia, like Laurence G. Horowitz, Senator Israel Stiefel, Charles Kahaner and Thomas Hodges, the governor's public relations officer. All participated in planting the tree-saplings.

As farmers, the Leaders were surprised at the greenness and fertility of the Northern Negev, which only recently was still a desert. Another surprise were the books inside the cottages of these frontier-men, dealing with philosophy, social planning, agriculture, poetry, and even Homer's Iliad.

Council Meeting Moved From Club As Members Balk

DETROIT (NJP)—A cocktail party for President Clarence L. Coleman Jr., national president of the American Council for Judaism, scheduled at the City Club of Detroit several weeks ago, was shifted to the Kingsley Inn here at the last moment.

The cancellation came after several members of the club, including Leonard Simons, protested the use of the club.

The meeting for Coleman was part of a drive to organize an active chapter in this city.

George H. Goldstone, an attorney, current chairman of the Detroit Council group, claims a membership of 65. Other local supporters of the council are Noel Buckner, son of Norman Buckner of Pontiac, and Lewis C. Frank.

Frank protested recently to the Jewish Community Council charging its staff had solicited signatures of local rabbis to the recent statement condemning the Council (NJP, May 11, 1956). His objection was referred to the Community Relations Committee which upheld the Council and praised the staff for its action.

Frank also charged "suppression of civil rights" in the cancellation of the meeting at the City club, but Leonard Simons told Frank that his position was that he couldn't remain a mem-

Magazine Repeats B-G To Visit Moscow

TEL-AVIV (NJP) — Israel's largest illustrated weekly, 'Haolam Haze' repeated this week that Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion "will shortly proceed to Moscow for talks with Soviet leaders." The paper added that Israel's ambassador to the USSR, General Joseph Avidar, is now preparing the details of the visit.

It will be recalled that the same paper published a similar report a few months ago. It now emphasizes the "decision of the visit has already been taken" and will shortly be implemented.

Sharett Yields Cadillacs, To Ride Buses Now

JERUSALEM (NJP) — Two luxurious Cadillacs which Moshe Sharett had received as personal gifts from friends abroad while he was Foreign Minister have been turned over by him to Israel.

"They were not given to me, but to the Foreign Minister," he said, adding that as a private citizen he can use a small car or like others, ride buses.

New Law Would Give 2 Names To All Israelis

JERUSALEM (NJP) — Because of the confusion involved when newcomers have no first names, the Minister of the Interior has introduced a law into the Knesset which would require everyone to have both a first and last name.

The proposed law would also prohibit the changing of a name more often than every seven years.

I. Bar Yehuda, the minister, told the Knesset that many Jewish immigrants from Arab countries lack a family name.

Under the projected law, the minister would be empowered to give a name to anyone who had not chosen one six months after the law went into effect.

U. S. JEWS SEEN CONCERNED WITH ISRAEL SOCIAL ORDER

NEW YORK (NJP)—"The social order now evolving within the boundaries of the State of Israel is going to concern us more and more."

This was the view of Dr. Simon Greenberg, vice-chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, expressed in a booklet published by the National Academy for Adult Jewish Studies of the United Synagogue of America (Conservative).

GREENBERG

Entitled, "Israel and Zionism: a Conservative Approach," the booklet takes up the problem of the extent "Jews who live beyond the boundaries of the State of Israel have the right or the obligation to seek to influence the character of the social order developing in Israel."

WITHOUT seeking to answer the specific question, Dr. Greenberg declared that "there is no avoiding the issue." He said that the dominant attitude of American Jews has been that it was their "duty to help those who settle in Eretz Ysrael to build the kind of society in which they and their children will want to live."

He added that: "We have no right to dictate to them whether they should build a socialistic society or one based on private ownership, a religious or a non-religious society."

He added, however: If within the State of Israel there will not develop a society that will be capable of inspiring such religious enthusiasm on the part of the Jews living in the Diaspora, then Israel will fail to serve as the great spiritual and religious center for Judaism, and the State of Israel will ultimately have as little spiritual significance for Jews living in the free countries beyond its borders as it now has for them politically."

Other questions taken up were, should all Jews be required to take up residence in the State of Israel, which was answered with a definite no, and the question of dual allegiance which elicited the same reply.

COSMETIC QUEEN PLANS

NEW YORK—Princess Helena Rubinstein Gourielli, owner of the cosmetic company which bears her name, plans to visit Israel this fall, to be present at the laying of a cornerstone or a new Tel Aviv pavilion of art, for the construction of which she has pledged $200,000.

National Jewish Leaders Must Back Desegregation, NCRAC Hears

Can't Be Southerner And Jewish Leader

ATLANTIC CITY (WNS)—Southern Jews who are also national Jewish leaders and who fail to support desegregation in the South by counseling a policy of "moderation" "have to make the hard choice, and in general will have to give up national leadership," this week declared Dr. Arnold Rose, University of Minnesota professor of sociology and an authority on minority and civil rights problems, speaking at the plenary session of the National Community Relations Advisory Council here. Dr. Rose said: "In a minority strategy, some may have to play the collaborationists' role, but they cannot also play the leaders' role."

"In the national Jewish organizations, most of the influence of southern members is directed toward asking for 'understanding' of the South and toward opposing public expressions of support for the Negro and the Supreme Court," Dr. Rose stated.

"SOME OF the national Jewish leaders have consequently become ardent proponents of the 'moderation' philosophy and among the most active spreaders of tales about incipient violence in the South. These Jewish leaders are contributing to a most serious disservice to the Jewish group as well as to the whole nation, in my opinion."

"Southern Jewish leaders can be expected to keep quiet about the Negro problem so as not to draw fire on themselves," Dr. Rose added.

"But national Jewish leaders have the opportunity that other American leaders have of helping to rid the United States of its major Achilles heel, which has particularly threatened the Jews. If they do not take a long run and courageous view of the current crisis, they are playing the same role that collaborationist Jews played in Europe during the Nazi period."

AT THE opening session of the four-day annual meeting, which was attended by 150 Jewish leaders from all parts of the country, a Roman Catholic educator, Dr. John J. Kane of Notre Dame university, predicted an increase in religious tensions in this country arising from differences over private and public education.

As aspects of such tension he cited Jewish and Italian quotas in some professional schools, the controversy over Federal aid to education, Bible reading in public schools, released-time and dismissed-time programs, and observance of Christian or Jewish holidays in public schools.

Bernard H. Trager, of Bridgeport, NCRAC chairman, called for the creation of representative community-wide agencies by Jewish communities over the

WORLD MEETING IS CANCELLED AS JEWS BARRED

NEW YORK (NJP)—Because Indonesia refused to grant visas to two Israeli delegates, the World University Service has cancelled its annual business meeting which was set to begin in Tarouna Giri on July 25.

The organization acted promptly as soon as it received verification of the refusal to issue the visas.

The World University Service is an international student welfare organization which provides technical and educational assistance to needy universities and students throughout the world.

The Indonesian delegates had invited the organization to meet there in 1956 during the group's assembly in Helsinki last August.

REFORM SCHOOL IN ISRAEL WILL BE PUSHED—GLUECK

CINCINNATI (NJP)—The Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion graduate school planned for Jerusalem "will be pushed to completion," Dr. Nelson Glueck, president of HUC-JIR announced last week.

A snag temporarily caught the proposed Reform graduate school when the Jerusalem city council refused to grant a building permit. But, said Glueck, "I have an agreement with the government that allows HUC-JIR to complete its school in Jerusalem. I don't think a city council will be able to stop fulfillment of that agreement."

Jews In South To Be Next Target

LOS ANGELES (NJP) Jews in the Deep South know "they're next" as targets of racial baiters if the hate movement against the Negro burgeons, according to Father Albert Foley, of Alabama, a recent visitor here.

Here to conduct a seminar in human relations at Loyola university, Father Albert Foley stated that the White Citizens Councils in the South are "an undemocratic, right wing movement, whose strength is concentrated in the old Cotton Kingdom."

Attached to the school will be a small chapel, similar to the one of the HUC-JIR campus in Cincinnati, he added.

"The purpose of the school is, not for proselytizing," he explained also.

Dr. Glueck made his announcement as he was preparing to leave for Israel at the end of this month to complete his archaeological expeditions in Negev Desert.

The expeditions, sponsored by the Louis M. Rabinowitz Foundation of New York, were begun four years ago. On this, the fourth summer expedition, Dr. Glueck hopes to complete his search for biblical sites in the Negev. To date the archaeologist-college president has uncovered about 300 sites.

Poland Agrees To Send Jewish Orphans To Israel

TEL AVIV (WNS)—The Polish charge d'affaires in Israel announced this week that Poland has agreed, for humanitarian reasons, to permit the emigration to Israel of Jewish orphans. The first group of Jewish children and youths may arrive in Israel this week, said the diplomat, J. Slowikowsky, who also declared that Poland and Israel would soon sign a trade agreement.

Orthodox Only Get Bid To Brodie Meet; Insult Is Charged

HARTFORD, Conn. (NJP)—Irrked because only Orthodox Jews were invited to a reception for Chief Rabbi Israel Brodie of Britain here, Rabbi Abraham J. Feldman charged a lack of "derech erez" in the lead editorial in The Jewish Ledger here. Rabbi Feldman, who is editor of the Ledger, is a past president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis (Reform), and president of the Synagogue Council of America.

Rabbi Feldman was given a chance to state his case by a letter from Rabbi Aaron Shuchatowitz which charged The Ledger obliquely with failure to welcome the Chief Rabbi "because the Rabbinical Council of America, an Orthodox rabbinical organization, sponsors the visit of the worthy personality."

"Of course there is an explanation for our not writing an editorial in connection with the recent visit of the Chief Rabbi of England," asserted Rabbi Feldman.

"THE REASON was one of just simple 'derech erez,' which freely translated may be 'courtesy with delicacy.' The Chief Rabbi of the British Empire came to Connecticut to visit his brethren here as he is visiting his brethren in other locales," the editorial continued.

"As opportunity was created, properly, for him to meet his fellow Jews. But, the sponsors of his visit went about making arrangements for the visit, all the time pointedly and gratuitously indicating that the Chief Rabbi did not come to visit all the Jews of the United States but only some Jews; that the welcoming meeting in Connecticut was to be attended only by certain Jews.

"IN THE failure to invite these other Jews, the Chief Rabbi's hosts indicated these other Jews were not welcome, were not

Has Until July To Agree To Arbitrate With Rabbi Winer

Conservative Congregation Given Ultimatum

By ZEKE SCHER

National Jewish POST Correspondent

DENVER (NJP)—One of the most fantastic congregational squabbles in this city's history is threatening to boil over into an open court fight.

The case is now in the hands of the Rabbinical Assembly of America which has set a July deadline for the congregation to agree to arbitration of the dispute—or face disciplinary consequences.

Involved in the much-discussed religious battle are:

1—Rabbi Gershon Winer, 34-year-old head of the BWH Synagogue, leading Conservative congregation in the Rocky Mountain region with 600 families.

2—Rabbi Emeritus C. E. H. Kauvar, former head of the congregation for many years and still a dominant figure in its operation.

3—The board of trustees of the synagogue which has fired Rabbi Winer.

AMONG THE growing developments in the case, stemming wanted, as if their presence might in some way be an affront to the guest from Britain and that to have these other Jews in the same room with him might endanger his immortal soul or contaminate the person of the guest and in some mysterious way endanger the religious loyalties of their own colleagues who may be present."

from the firing, are the forming of a new Conservative congregation by resigning members of BMH plus others and the proposed filing of charges by Rabbi Winer against Rabbi Kauvar with the ethics committee of the Rabbinical Assembly.

The original debate is over the BMH board's authority to fire Rabbi Winer while a valid contract, signed in April, 1955, and set to run through Aug 31, 1957, is still in effect.

Rabbi Winer claims he is entitled to not only back pay since March—which the board has refused to pay—but also his monthly salary of $1,200 through August of next year.

THE BOARD claims that Rabbi Winer was fired because it "lost confidence" in him as spiritual leader of the congregation.

Rabbi Winer's position is that he—not the rabbi emeritus—is the one to conduct the religious education and worship of the synagogue.

He claims he was preceded by four young rabbis who all resigned after short periods because of the interference imposed by Rabbi Kauvar and the boards under his control.

AFTER THE last rabbi left, it was pointed out, the board promised the Rabbinical Assembly it would not interfere with the next rabbi—Rabbi Winer.

A leading Denver firm of attorneys has been retained by Rabbi Winer in his fight against the board. Meanwhile, all parties concerned plus a representative of the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League have worked to avoid an open court battle.

Counsel for Rabbi Winer have advocated arbitration by the Rabbinical Assembly but the BMH board declined, claiming the assembly was prejudiced in the case.

ARBITRATION by a Denver businessman was advocated by the BMH board but was turned down by Rabbi Winer for the same reason.

The debate has not been lacking in invectives too. Rabbi Winer has been accused of being "arrogant and overbearing." The actions of the rabbi emeritus and the board have been termed "unsavory."

Resignations by the principal for the past nine years—and by two teachers of the BMH religious school have been turned in in recent weeks. Dr. Myron Wilkoff, former chairman of the BMH education committee, has resigned to become president of the New Conservative Congregation—as the new group has been tentatively named.

The heated debate could continue for perhaps months to come. Meanwhile, the dismissed rabbi continues to conduct Saturday services each week in the BMH synagogue.

Daily Columnist Sees Jews As Favoring Separatism For Selves

National Bodies Wrong To Aid Integration

By NORMAN SHAVIN
National Jewish POST Correspondent
BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—A widely-read pro-segregationist newspaper columnist, noting that "many Jewish leaders in the South belong to the Citizens Councils," declares that "it's all wrong" of "some Jewish organizations" which are "devoting themselves to the integration cause."

The columnist, John Temple Graves, who writes a daily column for a number of Southern papers from his Birmingham office, also said he deprecates associating anti-Semitism with Southern resistance to the Supreme Court's decisions on desegregation.

"LITTLE BY little," he writes, "the South is winning national sympathy."

But, he warns:

"It is a sympathy which can be lost if ever we let ourselves be taken over at home by vigilantes, Ku Kluxers, fascists, demagogues, hate-mongers, professional rebel-yellers, or plain damfools."

"AMONG SUCH," he maintains in a current column, "are not only the anti-Semites . . . but people who make us silly in national sight by seeing a Communist in every anti-segregationist."

Graves, who is an ardent supporter of the Citizens Councils, which are devoted to preserving segregation in various Southern states, reported he receives warnings from readers who see a villain in the Jewish race.

"EVERY time this column—and Citizens Council leaders—denounce the efforts of outlaw groups to associate anti-Semitism with Southern resistance, I begin getting 'enclosures' from people who always look for a villain and a plot in that race."

"The enclosures indicate that some Jewish organizations are indeed devoting themselves to the integration cause. It's all wrong of them, and of Roman Catholic organizations which are doing so, and Methodist and Presbyterian and my own Episcopalian. But it doesn't call on professional anti-Semites to make a speech or lead a parade," he writes.

"MANY JEWISH leaders in the South belong to the Citizens Councils."

Graves goes on to charge that there is some confusion in the minds of such people.

"A persecuted minority through the ages, Jewish people are easier to understand than Protestants and Catholics when they confuse decency, morality, democracy, and religion with a police and biological necessity like race segregation."

"YET JEWISH people are in many respects separatists themselves—in their religious and social life."

"The South has enough weight on its shoulders with the anti-integration fight to have to carry these professional anti-Semites. Most of them are carpet-baggers. Even if born here, they got their hate living somewhere else."

RABBI BERMAN, WIFE, PLAN TO MOVE TO ISRAEL IN 1957

CHICAGO (NJP)—Rabbi and Mrs. Morton M. Berman have announced plans to live in Israel with their children some time after Nov. 1, 1957.

This plan is the fulfillment of a long-cherished hope to live in Israel and to make whatever contribution they can to the upbuilding of the land.

While Rabbi Berman is not at the present free to speak of the work he is planning to do, Mrs. Berman, who is a biochemist, will continue her research and teaching in this field.

Rabbi Berman's retirement is made possible by the establishment on the part of his congregation, Temple Isaiah Israel, of

been spent in Temple Isaiah Israel.

Rabbi Berman pointed out, when interviewed, that a specific date after Nov. 1, 1957, could not be set as he does not contemplate leaving until there has been sufficient time to select his successor.

Speaking of his plans to settle with his wife and children in Israel, he said, that he felt other American Jews, who had devoted themselves over the years to the service of Israel, must feel themselves impelled to think seriously of making a contribution to the land itself.

MARILYN MARSH IS GOVERNOR OF OHIO GIRLS STATE

COLUMBUS (NJP)—With an Irishman as campaign manager, Marilyn Marsh, a Jewish girl from Cleveland, was elected governor of the Buckeye Girls State on the Capital University campus.

The program is an eight-day school on government sponsored by the Ohio American Legion Auxiliary. About 630 teen-age girls attended the confab.

Marilyn is vice president of the Northeastern Lake Federation of Temple Youth and a member of suburban Cleveland Heights High's a cappella choir.

Her campaign manager at the girl state's election was Peggy Maroney also of Cleveland. Slogan for the drive was "It's Marsh by garish for governor."

Marilyn was described by her parents as a girl who "enjoys everything." She has an uncle who is running for state senator and she said that he jokingly asked her for some election tips.

Frank J. Lausche, Ohio governor, congratulated Marilyn at her inauguration banquet attended by all the youngsters.

Marilyn's father is a dentist. There are three other children in the family.

THE ARTS

Israel Institutions Fund Here May Be Completely Changed, Including The Group's Name

By JOSEPH GALE

Service organizations, especially those laden with prestige, do not as a rule welcome internal changes which jar the strata of rich and established routine and may be interpreted by other agencies as an admission of weakness, not to be made and hardly to be witnessed.

So it is with some courage and a good deal of trepidation that the American Fund for Israel Institutions, a frequent visitor in this column, is in the process of an alteration so basic that its very purpose and aim, perhaps even the name, may undergo overhauling. The metamorphosis is no secret to welfare groups intimately aligned with the fund, but to the best of our knowledge, this is the first public disclosure of it.

THE SIGNS came during the incumbency of Edward Norman, the fund's late founder and president. We can only surmise that change failed to rear its head until as recently as three months ago, out of the deference in which Norman was held. At any rate, Samuel Rubin, now the fund's dynamic president, has heralded "the new orientation" in an address in which he said: "The trend toward limiting the program of the organization to the field of culture and fine arts has reached a point where a clear definition of aims and purposes is required."

In the baroque vocabulary of social service, such an innocuous statement resounds like a thunderclap; it means much more than it appears to say. It may mean that change is already underway, and according to our information, this indeed is the case—a narrowing, or if you will, a sharpening of endeavor in the field of culture—which in a year or so will exclude many of the fund's non-cultural beneficiaries.

WHAT EFFECT will this have upon fund-raising? What telling effect upon those who must bear the cleavage? Rubin and his board of directors stand ready: "It needs to be said that the tendency toward eventual change from 'all-embracing-for-all-purposes' organization has evolved gradually, beginning as far back as 1953. The idea of creating a homogenous organization is not an arbitrary decision—it reflects the opinion of the Israel government; it signals the conviction of the Jewish Agency, and it has been consistently stressed by our own Israel Advisory board."

There would seem little more to be said. For years, the fund served with limited resources an "octopus-like network" of beneficiaries, (and in a moment of odd castigation) "has not adjusted itself to the new role of Israel."

Rubin recognizes that the problem of adjustment may be thorny, even hazardous, and certainly not painless. The road ahead is blocked by such problems as re-education of welfare fund committees and of individual contributors, molding of public opinion in press, radio and television, and arrangements with the beneficiaries in order to ease the shock of sudden financial vacuum.

THE GOAL is thus crystallized as specifically and altruistically as possible: "In specific terms, this means that after the year of 1956, we must depart radically from our pattern. We must not confine ourselves to the maintenance of institutions but must also work toward the development of specific cultural and artistic projects. A change of name would necessarily be compelled by this development."

To implement such boldness, the fund envisions a five-year plan of its own: Tours of the Israel Philharmonic orchestra, Inbal Dance Troupe, the Pantomime Troupe of the Chamber Theatre, choirs, art festivals and exhibitions. It would also taste the benefits of the State Department's exchange program, under which the fund might enlist support for projects launched in Israel revolving about American orchestras, ballets and other cultural avenues embracing American citizens.

ON STILL another front: "The world's masterpieces have already entered museums and it is becoming increasingly difficult to acquire art treasures as gifts. But, guided by vision and courage, one can still receive extraordinary gifts and loans. This is a program that in the past has been improvised rather than planned, and it would be much more effective if we established it on a permanent basis and made this public service a serious business and a significant, exciting job. These projects would help us to galvanize the audience and create an area of a basic loyalty to the organization."

Vision and courage are not all that one hopes will be brought into play.

THE FUND is at a crossroad when the whole splendid ship stands to be scuttled by a collection of tugboats, as it were. Never forget that culture, as much as religion, bore aloft the flame during the Diaspora. And now, home, what terrible irony the flame not be fanned into light so bright it would illumine the earth.

Judges in the annual Miss Israel contest had no easy time this year as witness some of the finalists above. Although the girls appear here in swimming attire, when they paraded at the finals they were dressed in evening gowns. Only the judges got to see them in swimming suits. Rina Weiss (above) was crowned Miss Tel Aviv, and will go to London to compete in the Miss World contest. Israelis liked the idea that the winner this year is a Sabra, which means someone born in Israel. The contest is conducted by the Israeli women's magazine, La'Isha.

Miss Tal Hopes To Persuade U.S. Jews To Come To Israel

Israel Has Beauty To Spare As She Crowns New Queen

By CHARLES ROTH, Israel Bureau Chief

TEL AVIV—Eligible swains and talent scouts in the United States will find that the beauty of the 1956-57 Miss Israel runs far more than skin deep. She is not interested in screen tests or Hollywood contracts but would like to convince United States Jewry that they should come to Israel to live.

Charming, Tel Aviv-born Sarah Tal made off with unanimous honors at the Miss Israel contest held and will leave for Long Beach, Calif., to represent Israel in the Miss Universe contest. The contest, conducted to conform with Miss Universe specifications, is run here by Laisha, weekly women's magazine.

MISS TAL, whose real name is Beinstock, was renamed Tal right on the stage after winning the Miss Israel title.

Interviewed by The POST, the soft-spoken lass showed how serious she takes her role when she asserted that she would strive while in the United States to persuade what Jews she can to migrate to Israel, the sooner the better.

Sara's complexion is dark with light green eyes and her jet black hair is cut in Italian style in the front with kind of an English pony tail in the back. Her measurements are 36-24-36 — and her advice to other gals is personality development, sports, not too much sleep and good dieting.

THOUGH SHE received over ten proposals of marriage, Sara is not married and has no boy friend at the present. She feels that the 'right time to marry for a girl' is about 24 or so and she would like to have about two children as her parents did.

Sara loves the idea of the trip to the states and looks forward to seeing the Empire State building, Hollywood, the theater and TV, but doesn't want to stay too long so as not to hinder her studies in social work and her future job with new immigrants. At present a secretary at the Universal Sewing Machine Co. here, Sara also goes to school at night training to work with new immigrants, a job she feels will be her contribution to the she spent over a year at the American kibbutz of Sasa in the hills of upper Galilee. Being introduced to Americans when member of a chalutz (pioneer) youth movement, she went to the kibbutz after she graduated high school. From the kibbutz she entered the army and then went on to her present job here.

Sara came to be chosen beauty queen quite by accident. When sitting in Cassit, a Tel Aviv Cafe frequented by Israel showpeople, bohemians and intellectuals, photographer Harry Kaufman asked her if he might take her picture. He did and later entered it in the Miss Israel contest. The rest was in the stars.

THE CONTEST, now in its seventh year, is sponsored by women's magazine Laisha in cooperation with cosmetics manufacturer 'Taya' who distributed a tube of lipstick to all female viewers of the contest. Contestants must be Israeli and between the ages of 17 and 25. They are judged on their intelligence, poise, manners, speech, beauty, body measurements, and carriage.

The girls appear before the judges in private interviews, at specially arranged parties and finally on the stage on the night of the final choosing. Though the contestants appear before the judges in bathing suits in earlier parades, on the night of the big contest they are all fully clothed.

Second to Miss Israel was Miss Rina Weiss of Tel Aviv who will, as second prize winner, be sent to compete in the Miss World contest. Miss Weiss was also crowned Miss Tel Aviv.

HAIFA TO GET $20 MILLION PLANT

HAIFA (NJP)—With such investors as Abraham Feinberg, who controls the Kayser and Holeproof empires, and Israel Rogosin of Beaunit Mills behind it, a $20 million rayon plant will be built here. Feinberg is president of the Development Corporation for Israel, sponsors of the Israel bond sale.

The factory will be the biggest enterprise in Israel and plans to compete on the world market. Rogosin is said to be investing $3 million in the project.

Raw material for the mill will be imported at first, but later locally produced raw material will be used.

CINCINNATI ONCE had a Jewish mayor, Murray Season-good!

NEW YORK (NJP)—The crash of the Venezuelan airliner which took 73 lives orphaned a 10-year-old Jewish boy, whose parents and a brother and sister were victims of the tragedy.

The boy, Lawrence Handler, 10, escaped death because he was attending school here. He lived with his grandfather, Herman Handler, who broke the news to him, and his grandmother.

He was left behind to finish the school year when his family was returning to Caracas after a 12-week vacation in the United States. His father manufactured pots and pans in Venezuela.

I THINK AS I PLEASE

Help Give Israel New Ideas On How To Get More Tourists

By CARL ALPERT

HAIFA—The authorities responsible for the tourist program in Israel have just concluded a contest among Israelis, designed to produce ideas on how to make the tourist's stay in the country more pleasant.

The contest was good, as far as it went, but some of us who have been discussing it here feel that the emphasis has not been correct. Once a tourist gets to Israel, he generally enjoys his stay. The problem has been how to induce more visitors to come and see for themselves what Israel has to offer.

Many of the readers of this column have already been to Israel; others may be considering a trip. All are certainly well read about Israel, and surely many of you must have ideas on the subject.

We want to do everything we can to encourage the tourist industry, if only from a strictly commercial point of view, as an aid to Israel's economy.

Readers are invited to put their own ideas on paper and send them to me. I guarantee that they will reach the attention of those here who are responsible for the program.

I can offer no prizes, but shall be glad to review some of the best ideas in this column, and credit the writers. At the same time, each good idea will be of valuable help to Israel.

What Should Advertisements Feature?

The question is: What kind of inducements to offer, what sort of attractions to feature, what type of appeal to emphasize in advertisements and brochures? What does the American traveler look for on an overseas trip? What would encourage him to include Israel on an itinerary which perhaps covers England, France, Italy and Switzerland?

There is a difference, of course, between the Jewish tourist, and the non-Jewish. The first can be appealed to on certain emotional grounds. He presumably feels a kinship with Israel—though it is discouraging to note the large number of American Jewish tourists who spend a month or more in Europe, but do not take the extra step to Israel. And our experience has been that when some of these travelers do get to Israel, after six weeks in Europe, they exclaim with disappointment that they have only six or seven days left. If only they had known, they say.

As for the American non-Jew, what appeals to him? Hitherto the Israel tourist slogan has been "Visit the Land of the Bible." The belief is that every Christian will want to see the Holy Land. Is this appraisal correct?

Should We Call Israel An American Miniature?

Would there be more response if we were to call attention to the romance of a new nation forging a place for itself in the world? Should we underline that in many respects Israel is an America in miniature—a young democracy which dramatically illustrates the transition between pioneering days of the American Wild West, and 20th Century civilization?

Or should we forget our Zionism and talk about Israel's attractions as a vacation land? Will golf and tennis and Mediterranean fishing add to the country's attractiveness? What about our sandy beaches, our glorious mountain scenery, our modern hotels, our genial climate?

There are some who feel that Israel should emphasize those elements which are exotic and Oriental: The Bedouin market in Beersheba; the Druze villages on the mountaintops; the winding alleys of ancient Acre. And what about the antiquities, the archaeological excavations, the relics of the ancient days, which are now being systematically uncovered?

A determined campaign to encourage tourism can not neglect any of the country's features and attractions, but it is a basic principle of advertising that the emphasis must be placed on one or two outstanding elements. Which should these be?

We Are Looking For Fresh Ideas

You readers in American have the perspective which we may lack from here.

How can we best reach your neighbor up the street, who is already making plans for his next year's trip abroad? What if you were placed in charge of the Israel tourist program in the United States—what would you do?

Here is your opportunity to make a valuable contribution to Israel. Letters can be any length, can be written on both sides of the paper, can be typed or in legible longhand. There are no restrictions; everyone is invited to submit ideas, whether related to the editors or not.

Please send your letters via airmail directly to me in Israel. Address Carl Alpert, Post Office Box 4910, Haifa, Israel.

Teen Talk

By JUDY PALLER

Let Us Decide Curfew!

One of the favorite topics of discussion when mothers of teens congregate around the bridge table is the curfew—not the city-wide law, but the regulations in individual homes.

JUDY

"I do not see why Mrs. — lets her daughter stay out so late. My son does not get home till 2 o'clock!"

"Hmph, MY children never stay out after 1 o'clock. If they do, they are punished."

"I allow my daughter to use her own judgment."

WELL, MOTHERS and dads, we really prefer for you to let us use our own judgment, that is, if you have brought us up so that our judgment is sound. Perhaps when we first begin to to date we should have a deadline, but even then it should be somewhat flexible.

No matter how hard we try to beat the clock home, there are certain things that take time on a date.

IN THE FIRST PLACE, if we double or triple on our dates, it takes quite a while to pick up everyone. More time is consumed driving to the affair. If it is a downtown dance or movie or play, the driver has to find a parking lot.

After the show or formal we have to return to the parking lot and wait for the car to be brought around. We usually are just leaving the parking lot at the bewitching hour.

A stop at a restaurant has become the accepted way of ending the evening; only sometimes, it is morning before we are seated, waited on, and served.

ON THE JOURNEY home, each boy has to walk his girl to the door—and the minute hand keeps moving around.

If we are trustworthy and you know we are not parked on a backwoods road, why worry? What difference does it make if we are an extra 20 minutes late getting home?

Another thing that bothers us sometimes: You tell us to call home if we are going to be later than usual. If we are invited to

DIES ON NEWS SON HURT; DAD, TOO, GETS ARMY RITES

JERUSALEM (NJP)—A father who followed his only son in death, after hearing he had been wounded, was buried with full military honors on Mt. Herzl, the cemetery reserved only for soldiers.

Although the son, Zvi, 19, had actually died, his mother, fearing for the health of her husband, Dr. Avraham Druyan, told him only that Zvi had been wounded. The subterfuge was useless, however, and the famed doctor, who was secretary of the Israel Medical association, died of a stroke.

His wife, Mrs. Hanna Druyan, is secretary of the Hadassah X-ray department. A daughter, Dalia, 21, is a nurse at the Kiryat Community Center.

At the cemetery, Rabbi Avraham Haim Shaag, chairman of the Military Memorials department, said the father, like the son, had died in the service of his country.

The dispensation which allowed Dr. Druyan to be buried alongside his son was granted by Prime Minister Ben-Gurion.

No details as to how the son fell were released by the army.

The Need For Real Neighbors

I read with interest a conclusion that (1) the rest of the densation of the book "The Grass Is Never Greener" in a recent Reader's Digest. Written by Robert Thomas Allen. It is an account of how he and his family, tiring of Toronto's anything but sunny weather, set out in their car on a project of discovering just the perfect place to live, climate-wise. After several false starts and stops around the United States, they finally settle on the justly famous wonderland of the west coast, California, and its sunny, but invigorating year-round climate.

Yes, they decide, there can be no complaints about the weather here.

But does that mean there's a happy ending to the tale?

Sorry. No.

It seems one element to happiness is very much lacking. They find they've settled down as strangers in a strange land, and, from one revealing remark of Author Allen's we must conclude that (1) the rest of the local residents in that paradise, most of whom are recent arrivals themselves, aren't any too friendly, (he wrote of the fact that a body could get mighty weary of perfect weather and looking at the blue Pacific through the lush greenery without a friendly word ever spoken across a back yard); and besides (2) the Allen family must have sorely missed the old Toronto friends and neighbors.

End result: toodle-do with little regret to The Perfect Spot on Earth, and back to Toronto for the Allen family. Pooh, what's a little snow and sleet.

The Allens learned what the Jewish group long ago figured out, as witness the title of the book I've quoted chapter and verse so often, "Life is With People."

That reminds me of a couple of our relatives who recently sold a perfectly good beach cottage. Their reason: they would

You're Never Too Old

Romance Blooms At Miami Resort For Aged

By REVY BALKIN

MIAMI BEACH, Fla (NJP)—"Dig that bride and dig that groom," a 70-year-old man called to his neighbor, as Rabbi Morris Skop joined Lena Meiner, 72, and Hyman Grund, 81, in marriage this month.

The wedding took place in the gardens of the Floridian Residential club, formerly one of Miami Beach's swank hotels.

The club, operated by Mike Sossin, caters to those over 60 who have retired on a limited income. Guests are charged $25 a week, including three meals. They have the use of the salt water swimming pool, docks for fishing, and card and recreation rooms.

For those whose income is less, the guests may work a few hours a day around the hotel and make up the difference.

Jewish organizations — B'nai B'rith, Zionists — meet on the premises, and invite the oldsters to participate in cultural activities.

SEVERAL MONTHS ago Mike promised the reporter who first covered the story nationally (JNP, Dec. 16, '55) that he would have the guests in his hotel throw away their canes, and the only rocking his people would do . . . would be to the rock and roll music on the juke box.

And that's just what has happened!

Mike, the son of a rabbi, comments on it:

"MY FATHER had two thoughts in life which were indelibly impressed on my thinking. 'Thou shall not be alone—especially in your older years,' and 'Thou shall be happy in this world.'"

With this philosophy in mind,

Mike has dedicated himself to finding companionship and love for the older people.

"In the beginning," Mike related, "our number one problem was security—a roof over each head, and good food."

NOW, HOWEVER, he has set out to overcome the second major problem of the aged—loneliness!

Call me a shadchan if you like," Mike laughed, "but when people have companionship coupled with the knowledge of security, they are happy."

Mike pointed out that this was the Floridian's first marriage, "but it won't be the last. Rabbi Skop has offered as a wedding present to perform the marriage ceremony for all 'youngsters' over 70 years."

As Mike talked, he observed the wedding couple dancing a waltz to rock and roll music. "Dig that wonderful couple. Aren't they the greatest?"

And the couple's opinion about Mike?

"He's the most!" they said.

WHAT FOODS THESE MORSELS BE

SPEND LITTLE TIME IN THE KITCHEN WITH READY-TO-SERVE FOODS

These warm early summer days all balabostas should give thanks for many modern conveniences we often take for granted. How in the world did our mamas and bobbas ever manage without electric refrigeration . . . air conditioners . . . fans?

SARAH We are so accustomed to the easy way of doing things we may forget that it isn't so very many years since palm leaf fans were given to every guest. And ice was chopped for fruit juices squeezed by hand, instead of by electricity, or taken fresh frozen from the can of concentrate.

YET, I'M sure our forebears enjoyed the calm summer evenings fully as much as we do. They cooled themselves with cold baths, perhaps with a handful of salt or baking soda. They sat under the trees at the neighborhood bandstand concert. The youngsters collected fireflies, even as they do today.

Perhaps one day we and our children will be looking nostalgically back on these lazy summer evenings, when we turned on the fan and foraged in the freezer for something cool to drink.

WE ARE able to make special use of the handy canned and jarred foods, as well as the many frozen foods available to us.

I hope all my readers keep a stock of easy-to-open and easy-to-serve foods, as I do. A little ingenuity will make of a commercially packed food a real maihol. And so little time need be spent in the kitchen.

FISH SALAD

- 2 cups cooked flaked fish (canned or home-cooked and chilled)
- 1 cup raw finely chopped spinach
- 1/2 cup thinly sliced radishes
- 6 scallions, sliced
- 1/2 sweet red pepper, chopped
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 1/4 cup French dressing
- 2 tbsps. lemon juice.

Combine fish and vegetables. Chill thoroughly. Pour in dressings and lemon juice, and toss all ingredients until blended. Place on a platter or individual plates. Garnish with shredded salad greens.

Serves 6.

HEARTY FISH SALAD

- 1 jar commercial gefilte fish
 - 2 cups cooked elbow macaroni
 - 1/2 cup chopped pimiento
 - 1/2 cup mayonnaise
 - 4 beets, cooked and sliced
 - 4 hard cooked eggs
 - 2 lbs. asparagus, cooked and chilled
- Cool the macaroni after boiling. Add chopped pimiento and mayonnaise. Pack into a ring mold and chill. Unmold on a round serving plate. Fill the center with salad greens, chopped or shredded. Arrange the gefilte fish portions, asparagus, and beets around the ring. Garnish the top with egg slices. Serve very cold. A well-balanced main dish.

Serves 4.

CHICKEN SALAD BOWL

- 1/4 head endive
 - 1/4 head chicory
 - 1 cup diced celery
 - 1/4 cup diced green pepper
 - 1/4 cup sliced radishes
 - 1/2 cup French dressing
 - 1 cup diced chicken (leftover or canned)
 - 1 hard cooked egg, quartered
 - 2 tomatoes, quartered
 - 1 large carrot, made into curls
 - 8 black or green olives
- Break up greens with the fingers. Add celery and green pepper. Moisten with dressing. Place in the center and bottom of salad bowl. Arrange chicken in the center. Place egg and tomato wedges at intervals around. Garnish with carrot curls and olives. Serve cold. With a bowl of soup and hot toast or muffins, a good supper.

Serves 4.

A Word To The Wives

If you use paper plates on hot evenings, your family will call you clever. And there will be no bickering by the children about whose turn it is to wash.

Many dishes may be prepared in the cooler morning hours for later serving.

Something hot with an otherwise cold meal stimulates the appetite.

For warming baked earlier muffins, rolls, or biscuits without turning on the oven, have you ever tried placing them in the top of the double boiler over hot water for a few minutes? It works.

Be careful to avoid spoilage on hot days. Keep things under refrigeration until time to eat. This is especially important in the case of foods with eggs, cream or combinations.

This is not the time of year to be thrifty with leftovers. Anything at all suspicious, anything which has been left out of the refrigerator, anything even in the refrigerator too many days should be disposed of ruthlessly.

acquainted and make friends when one moves to a new community or even to a different section of the same city. But are people getting to be as self-absorber and cold as he pictured his neighbors on the west coast?

And there is a lot of moving being done these days, if we can judge by the For Sale signs in front of homes and the ads in the papers. In picking out a new home, are prospective buyers bothered much by the thought that their new neighbors might not be too neighborly?

One new and attractive housing development in our city, where the homes are in the $30 to $50 thousand bracket, may have hit on a good solution to this problem. I was told that all the residents meet once a week (incidentally, it is not a Jewish neighborhood) for a quick and light-hearted get-together. If you want all the details, they meet for cocktails about 45 minutes each Friday evening before dinner. Take turns at each others' homes. Any new-comers in the neighborhood automatically enter the magic circle and join the gang.

Make what you want of their idea, but they have definitely come to grips with a real problem in today's America-on-the-move

Leah Loves To Swing That Ping Pong Paddle

By GEORGE VASS

It may take a bit of derring-do to fly in the face of today's popular peddlers of mental nostrums, but it can readily be demonstrated that freedom from fear is not always desirable or salutary.

Fact is, a bit of fear in the right place is downright healthy. To illustrate: If Mrs. Leah Thal Neuberger had not been afraid of water it is unlikely that she would have reached international eminence in her chosen field of sport.

MRS. NEUBERGER decided to go to the YWCA in her home town of Columbus, O., to learn to swim. As she puts it: "While I was getting up courage to dive into the water, I tried my hand at a tennis table near the pool."

It's a good thing for ping pong that she did. In the last 15 years she has won 25 national titles—seven in singles, six in mixed doubles and 12 in women's doubles.

So, to her fear of water she owes her acquaintance with table tennis. It is only fair to add, however, that she overcame her fear to the extent of learning to swim.

MRS. NEUBERGER, now a resident of New York City, has turned her skill at table tennis into a passport to the world. She has participated in table tennis matches in Germany, Sweden, France, England, Austria, and Japan, among other countries. Recently she teamed up with Erwin Klein of Los Angeles to win the world mixed doubles championship in Tokyo. It gave her another trophy to add to the more than 500 trophies and medals she has collected.

Mrs. Neuberger is a 5-foot 2-inch, 123-pound, blue-eyed blonde. It makes an overgrown table tennis dub wonder how she compensates so successfully for her lack of size in a game in which height and reach seem so helpful.

"I'M KNOWN as a heavy chopper," she explains. "I put a lot of backspin on the ball. I also play many corner-to-corner shots that spin sideways. If you can keep your opponent busy trying to cope with spins, sooner or later he'll send one back high enough for you to put it away with a forehand drive."

Is that clear, fellow dubs? Lest any think that skill at ping pong is monopolized in her family by Mrs. Neuberger, it must be noted that on three of the occasions in which she has won the national women's doubles her partner has been her younger sister, Mrs. Thelma Thal Sommer of Philadelphia.

BUT HER husband, Al, apparently doesn't share her skill. Maybe that's why he doesn't mind her traveling about the world; it probably gives him a breather to practice with lesser lights.

But Mrs. Neuberger has another explanation.

"Al is very tolerant because it was table tennis that brought us together. The first time we met we decided to play for a penny a point. At the end of the evening Al owed me so much money I figured that the only way I'd ever collect would be to marry the guy."

SPORTS SHORTS... Former major league first baseman Lou Limmer has been optioned by Toronto of the International league to Charleston of the American association... The Memphis Chicks, owned by Zionist Leo Burson, have given away 6,000 season passes to kid baseball players and managers in the Memphis area... The Kansas City Athletics have signed Bernard Seaman of Mount Penn, Pa., a third basemen who recently graduated from Albright college, and have assigned him to Grand Island, Neb., in the Class D Nebraska State league.

FRENCH ASSEMBLY HEARS N. GOLDMANN ON PEACE

PARIS (NJP)—In an unusual talk for a Jewish leader, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, one of the few non-heads of a government to do so, addressed the French Parliament, and repeated his belief that the difficulties between Israel and her Arab neighbors could be resolved. The president of the World Zionist Organization opened with the declaration that he was "in sympathy with legitimate Arab nationalism." He asserted that the Arabs were entitled to have their own national life as the Jews were to theirs.

Referring to Russian penetration into the Mideast, Dr. Goldmann declared that it was "not aimed primarily against Israel."

Dr. Goldmann saw no hope for setting up the conditions for a peace settlement until the Arabs gave up their stubborn refusal to acknowledge the permanence of Israel. He felt that this intransigence could be removed only if the great powers, including Russia, maintained the balance of armed strength as between Israel and her neighbors and categorically asserted that they would never tolerate any attempt to annihilate Israel.

How Do You Tell Who Is A Zionist?

By M. Z. FRANK

The meaning of a word, we are told by our composition teachers, is determined by its usage. Let us look into the usage of the word "Zionist."

A. In his book, "New Star Over the Middle East," Kenneth Bibby speaks of Henry Morgenthau Jr. as a leading American Zionist. Obviously what he means is an American Jew who helps Israel.

In a recent TV program on the Middle East, Quincy Howe spoke of "Zionist funds" as the source of financing the economic development of Israel. Obviously he means such funds as the UJA and the Israel Bond drive.

In a recent report on John Foster Dulles' address to the B'nai B'rith in Washington, the New York Times described the audience as "pro-Zionist"—meaning pro-Israel.

B. You will often hear Jews say "I am for Israel, but I am not a Zionist." Pressed for an explanation, they will say, "Well, I don't intend to settle in Israel, America is my country." This is also Ben-Gurion's real or supposed definition of a Zionist, as distinct from a Jew who is for Israel.

C. According to current discussions in the Zionist press, in Zionist circles, at Zionist meetings and by Zionist writers in the general Jewish press, a Zionist is one who is concerned with Jewish cultural survival, especially in the diaspora. Judging by Nahum Goldmann's address, Zionism would narrow down, or ought to be narrowed down, to Jews who establish day schools in America. Anyway, these would be the best Zionists in the diaspora.

D. Technically speaking, a Zionist is a Jew who, whether he or she knows it or not, belongs to the World Zionist Organization, which meets in Congress and in Actions Committee. That is, he or she does not belong directly to the WZO, but to an organization affiliated with the WZO (that is why he or she sometimes does not know it). Also, a Zionist is one who, whether he or she knows it, owns a shekel he or she is supposed to have purchased but which, in fact, has been paid for by the party headquarters with or without the purchaser's knowledge, and who, whether he or she knows it, is represented at the Congress by a delegate.

There was a time when the delegate used to be elected at regular polls, and most Zionists knew they were either participating in elections or playing hooky. Today they don't even know they're abstaining from the polls.

BY CLASS A usage, Edward M. M. Warburg and William Rosenwald are the leading Zionists today. By Class B usage, the Klausenberg rebbe of Williamsburg in Brooklyn, who settled in Israel, is one of the best American Zionists. By Class C usage, the Lubavitcher rebbe is a No. 1 Zionist. But neither Warburg nor Rosenwald, nor either of the two rebbes qualify by usage. They don't belong to the Zionist Organization of America or the Labor Zionist Organization of America or Hadassah or Hashomer Hatzair or Mizrachi of the Revisionists. They don't care about the shekel and are not represented at the Zionist Congress or the Zionist Actions Committee.

This confusion about the meaning of the word "Zionist" did not exist 20 years ago. In those years Classes A, B, C, D were practically identical.

A non-Zionist who was actively engaged in helping the Jews in Palestine economically and politically was the exception rather than the rule. Most Zionists in 1936 lived in Europe, not in America, and they considered themselves potential candidates for immigration to Palestine at some time in the future. The question of "survival" hardly came up, first because the Zionists had plenty of work on their hands; second, because it was taken for granted that a Jew would not be a Zionist if he were not interested in Jews and Jewish survival.

THE ZIONIST Congress had a real live function to perform as the legislative authority of the incipient Jewish state in Palestine and the Zionists who bought the shekel knew they bought it, and knew what they wanted to do with it; they voted and took their vote seriously.

Things have changed. It is not the fault of the Zionists that they did. The Zionists are not to blame for the fact that Hitler slaughtered all the Jews of Eastern Europe and that there is a State of Israel. For the latter, they even deserve a great amount of credit. What Zionist leadership cannot be praised for is the way it handles the changed conditions.

ADDITIONAL BOOK REVIEWS

WHEN YOUR CHILD ASKS, by Simon Glustrom, $3.00 (Bloch).

With many suggestions for the flustered parent, Rabbi Glustrom here details the answers he himself has employed for eretematic children. His approach is modernist: "It is not the factual information that makes the Bible so great but rather its eternal truths." More than answers to queries about the Bible, religious practices, and festivals, the author also takes up the differences between Jew and non-Jew, the incidence of Jew-hatred, and Jewish attitudes to death. The bibliographies for young and old are in the main well chosen. The work is lucid, thorough, and highly valuable.

MOUNT MORIAH VIEW, by Nathan A. Barack, $3.00 (Block).

It was on Mount Moriah that Abraham came near to sacrificing his son, and it is from the eminence of Moriah and of the patriarch's readiness to devote his all to God that this preacher speaks. The legends and homilies centered about the Akedah provide excellent sermon material. But there are more than sermons and essays in the book; a section of letters and editorials also presents basic concepts of Jewish virtues, stress on learning and tradition, love of Israel, and all else that makes a good Jew. The writer quotes not alone from the Midrash, but from general history and literature. This is the third book by a good preacher.

His Idea Led To Travel Faster Than Sound

Jew, Father Of Jet Plane, Gets Top Honor

By NORMAN MELNICK
National Jewish POST Correspondent

DAYTON, O. — Ezra Kotcher, who has been called the "father of the supersonic airplane," has been chosen as one of America's 10 outstanding civil servants for 1956 by the National Civil Service League.

The Jewish scientist also was honored this week by Look magazine in its "Look Applauds" section.

KOTCHER, a technical director at the Wright Air Development Center near here, will receive his award at a banquet in Washington, D.C., on July 2, with banquet guests including members of President Eisenhower's Cabinet, justices of the United States Supreme Court, congressional leaders and members of the United States Civil Service Commission.

The award winners, chosen for distinguishing themselves in government service, were selected from more than 130 nominations submitted by all major federal government departments and agencies.

KOTCHER, who has been in federal service for 28 years as teacher, engineer and scientist, organized and served as the first director of the United States Air Force Institute of Technology. During World War II, he headed a team of scientists who, in a few short months, solved the secrets of the devastating German V-1 buzz bomb and then built and flew an American replica.

The distinguished aeronautical scientist also played a key role in the development of America's first jet airplane and organized and headed the early Air Force program for the development of guided missiles.

HE IS generally credited with conceiving of an airplane that could go faster than the speed of sound. His inspiration culminated in the rocket-powered research plane, XS-1, which broke the sound barrier on Oct. 14, 1947. Kotcher, who once told an interviewer that the supersonic airplane was merely "one

PROF. KAPLAN ANSWERS
QUERIES ON MOVEMENT

QUESTIONS JEWS ASK: RECONSTRUCTIONIST ANSWERS,
by Mordecai M. Kaplan, $4.75 (Reconstructionist Press).

The major virtue of this compilation by Prof. Kaplan—spokesman and apotheosis of the movement he instituted—is the potency of the replies to Jews who seek complete release from their people and their faith. Its lack of power stems from its futile hopes of complete community co-operation and for its many "musts."

Things will simply not work out according to plan; they never do when theory, however worthy, encounters the facts of Jewish life and thought. Again, Dr. Kaplan says nothing new when he describes Judaism variously as a culture, civilization, democratic process, or a tri-dimensional problem of Israel, God, and Torah. Most rabbis, also, have defined Judaism as a this-worldly faith — and this, too, is not a recent discovery. At the same time, his deviations from belief and observance were given expression to before the writer was born.

Jews do not turn to a new religious movement, including his own, because they have developed a varying philosophy—but solely to palliate and respectabilize, after the facts, non-observances and non-beliefs already adopted. Still, Prof. Kaplan supports kashruth and other observances and is not the complete religious nonconformant some of his followers have tried to make of him.

THE ADVENTURES OF SHLOMELE, by Saul Davis, $3.50 (Yoseloff).

Outstanding among the many published recountings of life in the Old Country is the story of Shlomele, who sometimes seems to be seeking acclaim as a Russian-Jewish Peck's Bad Boy. But his adventures, his loves, and his falls from the grace of tradition remain in the realm of reality, or the Tom Sawyer model. Once Shlomele saw Christians batter a Jewish youth to death—"that day completed my education as a Jew." So the family, suffering their own beatings on the way, deviously journeyed to London. This is the story, full of humor, tinged with tragedy, and encompassing the early years of every wandering Jew.

UNITED SYNAGOGUE PUBLICATIONS.

The National Academy for Adult Jewish Studies of the United Synagogue of America has published three important pamphlets, sold together at $1. Dr. Simon Greenberg is the author of "The Conservative Movement in Judaism," which he posits as "a great unifying force in Israel," advocating "innovation without regimentation," and of "Israel and Zionism: A Conservative Approach," which presents the traditional love of Zion. Dr. Robert Gordis' "The Ladder of Prayer" is a devout and emotional addendum to Jewish liturgic literature.

ATLAS HISTORI, by Moses Braver, 50c (C. S. Hammond and Company).

For the first time there has appeared a complete historical atlas in Hebrew for contemporary use. It will be distributed at a low price by Steimatsky of Tel Aviv, and is obtainable here at the publisher's, Maplewood, N. J. A beautiful and serviceable colored production, the atlas employs only Hebrew names. Thus the holy Roman empire appears as HaKesarut HaRomit HaKedoshah.

The EDITOR'S CHAIR

If anyone wants a fine neighbor, generous, Jewish-spirited, very strongly Zionist, we have one that we'll be happy to give away.

He's our neighbor here, right next door to our office, and no matter what you do in the way of editing a paper, you can never satisfy him. He's also a close friend, as witness our trip to Israel together in 1952.

No editorial we've written in recent years has been vehement enough, and no position we've taken on all the myriad of problems and situations we've commented on, forceful enough to satisfy him.

When it comes to logic, he allows his anger to derange it, as witness the following note he left on my desk this week-end.

Dear Gabriel Cohen:

I have again experienced a sensation of nausea after reading the letter by George Levison, and your comments in which you waste a full half column which ends by saying, "If someone better able than us doesn't answer Mr Levison's cruel letter, then we may try our hand at it, etc."

Now, Gabriel, why should you or anyone else waste their time and energy to answer such mentally sick people as George Levison and his kind, not to mention the valuable space in your paper which could be put to much better use in informing our people of the multitude of fine causes that we now have at work both in this country and abroad.

I am quite serious.

Would you bother to answer a letter received from an inmate of a mental institution. The Council for Judaism people are all mentally sick, and we should leave them alone. There is only one cure for them and it is up to each person to decide just when he wishes to become cured and accept Christianity. I am not being radical nor am I calling names or being rude, I am facing the facts.

These people don't want to remain Jews; they hate Jews. Why don't you leave them alone and let them drop quietly, one by one from our midst. Don't ask people who are busy with worthwhile Jewish undertaking to spend even one minute considering that which a George Levison writes. He lives in a democracy and can say and do as he pleases, but why in the name of all good Jews do you continue to waste your space with such nonsense.

BEN PRINCE.

This goes on continuously, and if I didn't love him, I long ago would have done to him what he always threatens to do to me—never have anything more to do with me or The POST.

In the point he raises in this

MUST NOT FAIL THIS TIME

The most serious problem facing Jewry today is the ban on emigration by the Moroccan government.

A comparison with the situation of Jews in Germany under Hitler is not altogether accurate in view of the fact that Moroccan Jews are not in danger of extermination. But the problem is identical insofar as the hour of decision once again stares the Jews of the world in the face.

Had world Jewry understood the nature of the holocaust that confronted Jews within the grasp of the Nazis and had we been willing to act courageously, many millions of Jews now dead might still be alive.

In the same sense, such is the hour of decision for Jews today.

For the time being it seems that the Jewish leadership feels that more might be achieved by quiet action. At least this is the only deduction possible from the lack of any outraged call upon the conscience of the world through the press and the air waves.

But if these measures fail, then United States Jewry must launch a campaign of enlightenment which will awake the world to the barbaric action of Morocco, which inevitably must be followed by similar action by other North African nations, in imprisoning its Jews to lives of squalor and degradation.

The American Jewish Committee is to be commended for sending its president, Irving M. Engel, to place the protest of the Jewish group before the United States government, and to urge action through diplomatic channels to reopen the doors of Morocco. No time was wasted, and in view of its previous reliance on the good word of the Moroccan government, the Committee is in the best position to make the case for United States Jewry.

Here again is shown the need for an organization of some kind, whether one with powers or one only of a consultative nature, which unites the United States Jewish community. Whether it be along the lines of an American Jewish Conference or a set-up of some other kind, periodic crises such as that now facing the Jewish group require more than a hasty meeting of a few key people and action on the basis of a fire department.

lines, thinking perhaps of the effect on readers of constant repetition.

But now as we think about it, however, we're inclined to believe that perhaps the headline writer is only leading with his chin and may be in for more grief than he anticipates.

The more attractive of the girls is going to resent being classed as only "beautiful bride" with those whom she considers of inferior pulchritude. She may have the notion, and what woman doesn't, that the headline over her photograph should have read at least: "Gorgeous Bride," to show the difference between her and her plainer sisters.

THOSE PREFABRICATED SYNAGOGUES

If you see an advertisement for a prefabricated synagogue appearing in The National Jewish POST do not be surprised.

Add to the marvels of the modern world, and to the prefabricated sukka which has been advertised in The POST for the past few years now, the prefabricated synagogue.

The advertisement, if it does materialize, might feature that the synagogue can be packed up and moved away as the congregation moves to the suburbs. This would eliminate the current dislocation which is so expensive to our Jewish communities.

On the other hand, the prefabricated synagogue might be a boon to the growth of mushroom congregations, those offensive services held in meeting halls on the High Holidays only for the connote, he fails to understand that I was answering Mr Levison's complaint against a news story that we carried. This was an important news story, because it may indicate the first signs of a split in the ranks of the Council.

We don't know that such a split will develop, because Council people have almost no place to go, but the tactics of the Council have been so unJewish in the past few years, that we have the feeling that a new group will cast itself off, as has happened continuously since the ninety rabbis formed the organizations some ten years ago. Now only one rabbi occupying a pulpit (we believe this is right) is a member of the Council, and he's the head of a congregation recently organized of Council members.

So if anyone can use a fine, attentive, not to be put off neighbor, I have one that I know that I'll be happy to ship to them. Merely address the Good Neighbor Department, National Jewish Post, and delivery will be made forthwith.

WAR SCARE IS NOT CAUSE OF EMIGRATION IN ISRAEL

● Editor, National Jewish POST: With reference to the article by Leo Heiman in connection with emigration from Israel (NJP, May 25, '56), I wish to state the following:

While it is true that there was some emigration from Israel during the last three years, it would not be alarming if the new emigrants were the newcomers.

However, it is alarming because several thousand old settlers have left the country, and when these settlers were professionals, a constructive element of the country.

I disagree that the war scare is the main reason for such emigration. The cause is mostly Israel's grave economic and political problems. I believe that the deep-rooted party politics which affects almost everyone's economic life is obnoxious.

Israel underrates the importance of the intellectual and professional element of her population and neglects their financial status. Lawyers, doctors, chemists and members of other professions do not receive salaries commensurate with their professions.

I know a few judges and district attorneys who have resigned, not because they do not wish to serve their country, but because their salaries were lower than the wages of a taxi driver. That was the reason for so many strikes on the part of doctors, teachers, professors, and others. The same reasoning applies to the fact that many Israeli students do not return to Israel after completion of their studies abroad.

Unless Israel remedies this situation and abrogates the requirement of party membership for its best positions, it will lose the services of these valuable professional people, and it will not stop the flow of emigration.

The Ordeal of Moses

By RABBI J. J. WEINSTEIN

Wedge between the census of the tribes of Israel and the description of the daily and festival animal sacrifices, like tender brisket between two pieces of stale bread, is the brief but moving account of the Lord's denial to Moses of the Promised Land. Moses is permitted to gaze upon the Land across the Jordan, but he is not to enter it.

Moses had been impatient in the matter of smiting the rock at Meribah and had thus dishonored the Lord in the presence of the congregation. The Lord had decreed this punishment and the Lord's decrees are not changed—though the Midrash gives in agonizing detail Moses' fervid plea for commiseration of the sentence.

IF THE decree seems harsh considering that Moses had put up with the impatience of the people for 40 years—sometimes even when the Lord Himself had lost patience—we are reminded that with high privilege goes high responsibility. Moses was to set his seal upon the character of an eternal people.

MOSES, LIKE the builders of Babel, like Prometheus the fire-snatcher, is a God forger. He would inform Nature with God's urgency—and God must be urgent while the people hunger and thirst.

But God will not be forced. He prefers to be at one with Nature. The water will come in due course from the rock. Man takes too much upon himself to lay about with his ingenious divining rod.

The waters gushed forth at Meribah but Moses was denied to the people when they needed him most.

EVERY TIME an airplane falls into the sea, the melted wings of Icarus hover over it. Every time a mechanical or human failure turns a train track or an expressway into a charnel house, the vultures pluck anew at Prometheus' gut. This does not mean, of course, that man must put away his divining rod and let nature take its course. Nature enforces its own less spectacular cruelties.

John Hersey, in "The Single Pebble" gives us a most graphic picture of the rapacious tyranny of the Yangtze and the cold indifference of the rock cliffs that conspire to squeeze the river to the sticking point and aim it at the throat of man. You share the American engineers' impatience to bring the dynamite and blow out the jagged teeth of the flowing tiger and dam its waters into a captured, well-trained lake.

SUPPOSE SOME people are immured in the foundations of that dam or are destroyed in the mechanical failures of the machinery! They will number less than the lives of the coolies who are slowly worn out in dragging the boats and barges against the river's raging tide.

I prefer to think God was not punishing Moses but rather rewarding him. He retired him at the height of his powers and reputation. He spared him the disillusion and the heartache of the new beginnings in the over-promised land. He let the younger Joshua devise the new measures required by the changed circumstances of the new day.

The Lord, Einstein reminds us, is subtle. He is never plain mean.

READER CRITICIZES POST FOR PRINTING BETAR AD

● Editor, National Jewish POST:

In your publication of June 8 you have a full-page advertisement of Brit Trumpeldor of America (Betar) that starts out: "Yes, Israel is the land of the free but—"

This advertisement is slanderous to the Jewish Agency and plays badly into the hands of the Arab League and the Council for Judaism, and to those who refuse to contribute to the United Jewish Appeal.

It claims that the people of Yinnon, a village in the Mijer, were ruthlessly deprived of their most basic rights, that Yinnon is threatened with economic annihilation, all because the village did not support the Mapai in the last election.

The Jewish Agency officials, it says further, have deprived us of our mules and our cars. Our cows were led away. Our people forcibly removed from outside jobs with the Agency while new members (reliable Mapai men) were moved in by force."

When one reads this, he cannot help but be terribly disturbed. Frankly, it is unbelievable.

I, for one, who for over three decades wholeheartedly supported the magnificent work done in Israel and had the privilege recently on my visit there to see it with my own eyes, cannot believe these statements.

Why do these people of the Betar write such slanderous letters? It is easy to understand when one reads the end of the letter—"Send your money to the Betar."

The Herut in Israel have thus already extended to the readers the information. The Herut and the Betar (or Brit Trumpeldor) are really one organization. They are trying to endanger the existence of the State of Israel. From them, one can expect anything, even a letter that will serve the cause of the Arabs in their determination to obliterate the state.

But why did my POST, that I so enjoy reading every week end, print this without an editor's note?

Do you believe it? Do you think Mapai, the party of the prime minister of Israel, and the Jewish Agency are what these extremists write? Why did not the editor of The POST say something to show who and what these people really are?

Convert To Judaism Urges Weisberger Hits Missionary Work To Get Out and See

● Editor, National Jewish POST:

I am a true convert to the Jewish religion, and I feel, therefore, that I should know something about converting people to the Jewish religion.

I was raised a Protestant, but I never accepted Christianity and never was really a Christian. There is, also, little or no Hebrew blood in me.

I read the article "Israelis Debate Jewish Missionary Activity" (NJP, June 1, '56) and thought, perhaps, you and some of your readers might find the viewpoints of someone like me of interest.

As far as religious Christians and Jews going around trying to convert each other goes, I think that this sort of thing is very foolish and can produce nothing but antagonism.

Why should religious Christians and Jews go around pestering each other, when there are many people in the world who have no particular religion, or who do not even know anything?

CAROLYN CUSON
Evanston, Ill.

● Editor, National Jewish POST:

I wish to register my differences with that pessimist, Bernard Weisberger. I think he is an armchair observer, that all he does is to sit down in his armchair, wag his head and cry. All he has to do is to get out and see.

There are in New York temples and synagogues of every description. There are organizations of various types. He need not join any but maybe it would do him some good to visit some of them, then he would see that there are people just as much concerned as he, but instead of wasting their time and writing silly letters, they are actively engaged in doing something about it.

Fortunately, there are such groups as the Jewish War Veterans of the United States, the American Jewish Committee, the B'nai B'rith and its Hillel Foundations, the youth groups of the various synagogue organizations. The number of organizations point to the healthiness of the Jewish community of this nation and not to its illness.

The differences of opinion may

Says Agency Statement Dishonest, Evasive

● Editor, National Jewish POST:

It is quite obvious that the statement issued by the Jewish Agency in reference to the Yinnon matter is dishonest and completely evasive of the issues involved.

The Jewish Agency once again displayed its cowardliness before the American Jewish public by refusing to show a representative of Betar a copy of their statement.

We challenge the Mapai-dominated Jewish Agency to face the facts squarely and answer the following charges.

Do you deny that a vast majority of the Yinnon settlers voted to leave Mapai?

Do you deny that immediately following the election the mules and farm implements rightfully belonging to Yinnon were taken away from them without any explanation?

Do you deny that members of Yinnon working at Mapai—Controlled establishments were thrown out of their jobs and replaced by reliable Mapai strong men?

Do you deny the fact that when representatives of Yinnon went to Jerusalem to protest this injustice they were thrown into jail?

One point the Jewish Agency does admit, that is that 20,000 pounds belonging to the Yinnon settlement were blocked. The reason is that Yinnon refused to comply with the rules and regulations governing marketing co-operatives of other settlements.

However, the Jewish Agency is once again evading the issue but not stating what those rules and regulations are. Do you deny that the only rule which they broke was the exercising of their democratic right to leave Mapai.

We challenge Mrs. Rose Halperin, chairman of the American executive of the Jewish Agency, to squarely answer these charges. We believe that the American Jewish community, which makes so many millions of dollars available to Israel, through the United Jewish Appeal, is entitled to know the answers.

The settlers of Yinnon turned to us for help. They turned to us as a last resort after their appeal in Jerusalem ended in jail. They appealed to us to bring their case before the American Jewish public.

The generous response of the American Jewish public, as a result of our statement in the National Jewish Post, is a clear indication that the American Jewish community fully understands the issues involved. The day is not too distant when the Mapai rulers will be called to task to account for their actions. Thus it is clear that the issues of freedom of choice, freedom from fear and the right to vote are still being threatened by Mapai economic coercion.

We challenge the Jewish Agency to appoint an impartial investigating committee composed of American Jews of their choosing to investigate the matter and thus enable the American Jewish public to judge for themselves as to who is telling the truth.

SERVE FEDERAL PRISONS, OFFICIAL OF SCA REPORTS

● Editor, National Jewish POST:

I read with considerable interest your editorial, "Jewish Prison Inmates" (NJP, June 1, '56).

I am surprised that you did not know that the Synagogue Council of America, the co-ordinating agency for the Orthodox, Conservative and Reform rabbinic and congregational bodies of Judaism, conducts—in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Justice—a program of providing chaplains and religious supplies to Jewish inmates in the 25 Federal correctional institutions.

The program has been going on efficiently, but without fanfare, for a number of years.

During that time, the Synagogue Council, through its devoted corps of chaplains, has made a superb contribution through the rehabilitation of the lives of numerous Jewish men and women who might otherwise have remained, in your words, "hardened criminals beyond saving."

You will be interested to know that the Synagogue Council Federal prison commission, which I have been serving as chairman, is initiating a comprehensive survey of the Federal correctional institutions in order to be confusing to archaic letter writers of Mr. Weisberger's ilk—but it is these differences of thought that make the world go around.

continue to improve our religious services to these unfortunate Jews while they remain confined, and to help them become integrated in the communities to which they return following their release.

While I am writing, may I point out that none of the recent controversial publicity about the Synagogue Council brought to the awareness of American Jewry the fact that despite ideological differences, the Synagogue Council has managed quietly and effectively through the 30 years of its existence to render a solid service to the entire American Jewish community. It has done this with a very small budget, a small staff, and very little self-promotion.

If there were some way to bring this necessary and impressive service to the attention of American Jewry, than I am firmly convinced that responsible Jewish men and women throughout the country would not permit the Synagogue Council to continue to be hampered by lack of funds.

With but a portion of the funds which individual Jews, welfare funds and federations, and congregations have allocated to other agencies, the Synagogue Council would be enabled to carry on even more effectively its wide variety of services as spokesman for religious Jewry on the international, national and local scenes. With some financial aid by friends, the Council could

ADL Sponsored Meeting On Desegregation

● Editor, National Jewish POST:

I am very happy that you saw fit to front-page the story about the Southern Regional Conference on Human Relations Education held at the University of Oklahoma and sponsored jointly by the university and "a national Jewish organization."

I am sure it was purely through inadvertence and the rush of meeting a deadline that the name of the organization—the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith—was omitted from the story. The headline indicated that you meant to include it.

I believe that the conference was perhaps the single most important recent event that has tried to bring thoughtfulness to bear on the problem instead of forensics.

Among the 125 people present from every state in the South were college presidents, deans of education, school superintendents and administrators, members of boards of education, including the president of the board of one of the South's major cities, college professors and school teachers. They represent responsible forces in the South who are seeking peaceful, effective ways of converting de jure desegregation into de facto integration.

Says Similar Gloomy Predictions Of 50 Years Ago Not Fulfilled

● Editor, National Jewish POST:

I should like to comment briefly on Bernard Weisberger's despairing letter (NJP, June 1, 1956).

For one thing, similar predictions were made as far back as 50 years ago, with the net result that today, while the American-Jewish community possesses many shortcomings, nonetheless it has a proud record of activity in many areas of Jewish life. With patience, time, faith, and, especially, sincere individuals working toward the amelioration of its problems, significant progress will be made toward creating a still more vibrant and dynamic community.

It is unfortunate that the positive achievements in American-Jewish life, in long-range terms of Jewish survival, are not as appealing as disputes and pessimistic avowals.

The dramatic story of what is happening in certain areas of Jewish life is too often neglected. For example, in the past 10 years at Yeshiva University more than 400 products of the American scene, most of them second generation Americans, have received semicha, attesting to their ability to master Jewish learning.

All these rabbis are not in the professional rabbinate. Many have gone on to become lawyers, doctors, businessmen, an indication that we can create here a positive mind and a Jewish-conscious laity. Most of these people are still comparatively young, hence their impact on Jewish life in its totality is still to be felt.

This June we will graduate 500 students. More than 90 per cent of these young people, men and women, have received a dual education in Jewish and academic studies. They will be a tremendous asset for Jewry in the long run.

In the fall, we will admit an equal number of students, and only space prevents us from enrolling many others. These young people are not from New York City alone—they come from every part of the United States.

I feel that one of the greatest mistakes we can make is to sell the American-Jewish community short. The time is not too far off when a better understanding will be created of those institutions doing the day-to-day job of educating our youth. Jewish education in general, especially such areas as the day school movement and institutions of higher learning, will eventually get their due share of interest and support from the community as a whole.

Jewish cultural and religious activity has, by necessity, had to play "second fiddle" to the urgent demands of philanthropy, but, at the same time, there must emerge a realization that in the long run these represent the basic answer for Jewish survival. It is equally important that we have faith in the ability of the American Jew to recognize this problem. It is equally important, too, that the issue be faced as to when we will start backing the positive elements in Jewish life, be they religious or cultural.

I urge Weisberger and others who may feel this way (perhaps even despairing Zionists, who are equally concerned with the question of Jewish survival) if they want to be reinvigorated, to acquaint themselves with the work of our day schools, or spend a day at Yeshiva University.

SAM HARTSTEIN,
Director,
Dept. of Public Relations,

Silver Flays U. S. In Strongest Attack On Mideast Policy

By IRVING GRAY
National Jewish POST Correspondent

CLEVELAND (NJP) — Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver made his strongest attack to date on United States foreign policy at a dinner given here in his honor.

More than 600 people, who bought at least $1,000 worth of Israel Bonds in order to attend, address in which he slapped at what he called "America's specious and bogus argument" that it does not want to engage in an arms race while it sells arms to Arab states.

He fiercely denounced "blunders of the western powers" which denied defensive arms to the lone democracy in the Middle East while Arabs were given more arms than they could digest.

"Why is it that providing arms to Arab nations does not constitute an arms race whereas selling arms to Israel does?" he asked.

He stressed that the state department was urging the U. S. Congress to appropriate billions of dollars for free arms to Tito, a dictator who was hailed in a triumphal tour of Russia and who signed declarations diametrically opposed to America's foreign policy.

WHY IS ISRAEL singled out not to enjoy this defense, he asked.

"America's Middle East eyes are riveted on oil," he said. "The situation is bound to change, since there is no logic underlying United States policy in the area," he said.

Israel may be hurt but will never be conquered, he said.

"Israel is fighting for survival and I know the spirit of the people. They will never be conquered by professional soldiers," he said as he underscored the fact that the nation was founded by men of brave hearts whose devotion remained unshaken through present and future crises.

ABBA EBAN was to have been the guest speaker, but he was recalled to Israel at the last moment. This is the sixth time that he has cancelled a local engagement. Silver was being honored as the new chairman of the Israel bond organization's national board of governors.

During the affair Rabbi Silver was described as "being among the dozen greatest Americans of our generation" and singled out as being this country's number one Zionist. He was also described as a "man who does not belong only to the Jews but belongs to all America and the rest of the world."

New Mystery Person Contest Goes Into Second Week

Almost without exception, every answer to the current Mystery Person contest was Nahum Goldmann — and all were wrong. So the contest goes into its second week, with the new hint as follows:

The Mystery Person charged that the adversaries of Israel succeeded in maneuvering the Jewish State into a position of defiance and rebellion of the United Nations, and as a result from the point of view of the UN, Israel was forced into an attitude which it roundly condemned when it was assumed by the Arabs in 1948.

The first hint for the new Mystery Person is:

The Mystery Person called for the creation of a "Council for Israel" to include Zionists and non-Zionists on a common platform for all pro-Israel forces in the United States.

The rules are: The Mystery person will be a living Jew, who is known for activity within the Jewish community. The Mystery Person may be a man or woman and can live in any part of the world.

Prize money is $25.00, but each week a new hint will be given, while the prize money will be reduced by $5.00 until the final week when only $5.00 will be offered.

Replies must be on the official coupon blank in this week's paper, and must be postmarked not later than Monday, July 2 (or Tuesday, July 3, if the reader lives west of Denver, Colo.). In case of a tie, the prize money will be divided equally among those answering correctly. Answers should be addressed to The Mystery Person Contest, National Jewish Post, Post Office Box 1633, Indianapolis 6, Indiana.
